No Additional Materials are required.

READ THESE INSTRUCTIONS FIRST

An answer booklet is provided inside this question paper. You should follow the instructions on the front cover of the answer booklet. If you need additional answer paper ask the invigilator for a continuation booklet.

Answer two questions: one question from Section A and one question from Section B.

At least one of the questions you answer must be a (b) passage-based question chosen from either Section A or Section B.

You are reminded of the need for good English and clear presentation in your answers.

All questions in this paper carry equal marks.

This document consists of 14 printed pages, 2 blank pages and 1 insert.

Section A

Answer one question from this section.

Remember, at least one of the questions you answer must be a (b) passage-based question chosen from either Section A or Section B.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE: Measure for Measure

- 1 Either (a) In what ways and with what effects does Shakespeare present marriage in Measure for Measure?
- Or (b) Paying close attention to language, tone and action, discuss the following passage and its significance in the play.

[Enter ANGELO, ESCALUS, a JUSTICE, PROVOST, Officers, and other Attendants.]

Angelo: We must not make a scarecrow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape till custom make it
Their perch, and not their terror. 5

Escalus: Ay, but yet
Let us be keen, and rather cut a little
Than fall and bruise to death. Alas! this gentleman,
Whom I would save, had a most noble father. 10
Let but your honour know,
Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue,
That, in the working of your own affections,
Had time coher'd with place, or place with wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of our blood 15
Could have attain'd th' effect of your own purpose,
Whether you had not sometime in your life
Err'd in this point which now you censure him,
And pull'd the law upon you.

Angelo: 'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus, 20
Another thing to fall. I not deny
The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try. What's open made to justice,
That justice seizes. What knows the laws 25
That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very pregnant,
The jewel that we find, we stoop and take 't,
Because we see it; but what we do not see
We tread upon, and never think of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence 30
For I have had such faults; but rather tell me,
When I, that censure him, do so offend,
Let mine own judgment pattern out my death,
And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.

Escalus: Be it as your wisdom will. 35

Angelo: Where is the Provost?

Provost: Here, if it like your honour.

Angelo: See that Claudio

- Be executed by nine to-morrow morning;
 Bring him his confessor; let him be prepar'd; 40
 For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage. [Exit PROVOST.]
- Escalus* [Aside]: Well, heaven forgive him! and forgive us all!
 Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall;
 Some run from breaks of ice, and answer none,
 And some condemned for a fault alone. 45
 [Enter ELBOW and Officers with FROTH and POMPEY.]
- Elbow*: Come, bring them away; if these be good people in a commonweal that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no law; bring them away.
- Angelo*: How now, sir! What's your name, and what's the matter? 50
- Elbow*: If it please your honour, I am the poor Duke's constable, and my name is Elbow; I do lean upon justice, sir, and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious benefactors.
- Angelo*: Benefactors! Well – what benefactors are they? Are they not malefactors? 55
- Elbow*: If it please your honour, I know not well what they are; but precise villains they are, that I am sure of, and void of all profanation in the world that good Christians ought to have.
- Escalus*: This comes off well; here's a wise officer.
- Angelo*: Go to; what quality are they of? Elbow is your name? Why dost thou not speak, Elbow? 60
- Pompey*: He cannot, sir; he's out at elbow.

Act 2, Scene 1

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE: Richard II

- 2 Either (a) Discuss some of the effects created by Shakespeare's use of symbols and symbolism in the play Richard II.
- Or (b) Paying close attention to language, tone and action, discuss the following passage, showing its significance in the play.

Northumberland:	The King is not himself, but basely led By flatterers; and what they will inform, Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all, That will the King severely prosecute 'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.	5
Ross:	The commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes; And quite lost their hearts; the nobles hath he fin'd For ancient quarrels and quite lost their hearts.
Willoughby:	And daily new exactions are devis'd, As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what; But what, a God's name, doth become of this?	10
Northumberland:	Wars hath not wasted it, for warr'd he hath not, But basely yielded upon compromise That which his noble ancestors achiev'd with blows. More hath he spent in peace than they in wars.	15
Ross:	The Earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.
Willoughby:	The King's grown bankrupt like a broken man.
Northumberland:	Reproach and dissolution hangeth over him.
Ross:	He hath not money for these Irish wars, His burdensome taxations notwithstanding, But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.	20
Northumberland:	His noble kinsman – most degenerate king! But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing, Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm; We see the wind sit sore upon our sails, And yet we strike not, but securely perish.	25
Ross:	We see the very wreck that we must suffer; And unavoyd is the danger now For suffering so the causes of our wreck.
Northumberland:	Not so; even through the hollow eyes of death I spy life peering; but I dare not say How near the tidings of our comfort is.	30
Willoughby:	Nay, let us share thy thoughts as thou dost ours.
Ross:	Be confident to speak, Northumberland. We three are but thyself, and, speaking so, Thy words are but as thoughts; therefore be bold.	35
Northumberland:	Then thus: I have from Le Port Blanc, a bay In Brittany, receiv'd intelligence That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainold Lord Cobham, That late broke from the Duke of Exeter, His brother, Archbishop late of Canterbury, Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Ramston,	40

Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis
Quint –

All these, well furnish'd by the Duke of Britaine, 45
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making hither with all due expedience,
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore.

Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the King for Ireland. 50

If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
Imp out our drooping country's broken wing,
Redeem from broking pawn the blemish'd crown,
Wipe off the dust that hides our sceptre's gilt, 55
And make high majesty look like itself,

Away with me in post to Ravenspurgh;
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay and be secret, and myself will go.

Ross: To horse, to horse! Urge doubts to them that fear.

Willoughby: Hold out my horse, and I will first be there. [Exeunt. 60

Act 2, Scene 1

Section B

Answer one question from this section.

Remember, at least one of the questions you answer must be a (b) passage-based question chosen from either Section A or Section B.

JANE AUSTEN: Emma

- 3 Either (a) Discuss some of the effects created by Austen’s presentation of different attitudes to money and wealth in the novel.
- Or (b) Paying close attention to the effects of the writing, discuss the following passage, showing what it contributes to your understanding of Austen’s characterisation of Emma.

When Harriet had closed her evidence, she appealed to her dear Miss Woodhouse, to say whether she had not good ground for hope.

“I never should have presumed to think of it at first,” said she, “but for you. You told me to observe him carefully, and let his behaviour be the rule of mine — and so I have. But now I seem to feel that I may deserve him; and that if he does choose me, it will not be any thing so very wonderful.”

The bitter feelings occasioned by this speech, the many bitter feelings, made the utmost exertion necessary on Emma’s side, to enable her to say on reply,

“Harriet, I will only venture to declare, that Mr. Knightley is the last man in the world, who would intentionally give any woman the idea of his feeling for her more than he really does.”

10

Harriet seemed ready to worship her friend for a sentence so satisfactory; and Emma was only saved from raptures and fondness, which at that moment would have been dreadful penance, by the sound of her father’s footsteps. He was coming through the hall. Harriet was too much agitated to encounter him. “She could not compose herself — Mr. Woodhouse would be alarmed — she had better go;” — with most ready encouragement from her friend, therefore, she passed off through another door — and the moment she was gone, this was the spontaneous burst of Emma’s feelings: “Oh God! that I had never seen her!”

The rest of the day, the following night, were hardly enough for her thoughts. — She was bewildered amidst the confusion of all that had rushed on her within the last few hours. Every moment had brought a fresh surprise; and every surprise must be matter of humiliation to her. — How to understand it all! How to understand the deceptions she had been thus practising on herself, and living under! — The blunders, the blindness of her own head and heart! — she sat still, she walked about, she tried her own room, she tried the shrubbery — in every place, every posture, she perceived that she had acted most weakly; that she had been imposed on by others in a most mortifying degree; that she had been imposing on herself in a degree yet more mortifying; that she was wretched, and should probably find this day but the beginning of wretchedness.

25

To understand, thoroughly understand her own heart, was the first endeavour. To that point went every leisure moment which her father’s claims on her allowed, and every moment of involuntary absence of mind.

How long had Mr. Knightley been so dear to her, as every feeling declared him now to be? When had his influence, such influence begun? — When had he succeeded to that place in her affection, which Frank Churchill had once, for a short period, occupied? — She looked back; she compared the two — compared them, as they had always stood in her estimation, from the time of the latter’s becoming known to her — and as they must at any time have been compared by her, had it — oh! had it, by any blessed felicity, occurred to her, to institute the comparison. — 40

She saw that there never had been a time when she did not consider Mr. Knightley as infinitely the superior, or when his regard for her had not been infinitely the most dear. She saw, that in persuading herself, in fancying, in acting to the contrary, she had been entirely under a delusion, totally ignorant of her own heart — and, in short, 45 that she had never really cared for Frank Churchill at all!

EMILY BRONTË: Wuthering Heights

- 4 Either (a) Cathy says: 'My love for Heathcliff resembles the eternal rocks beneath - a source of little visible delight, but necessary.'

In the light of this comment, discuss Brontë's presentation of the relationship between Cathy Linton and Heathcliff.

- Or (b) Paying close attention to language, tone and narrative techniques, discuss the following extract, showing its significance in the novel.

I got a long letter which I considered odd, coming from the pen of a bride just out of the honeymoon. I'll read it: for I keep it yet. Any relic of the dead is precious, if they were valued living.

DEAR ELLEN, it begins:—

I came last night to Wuthering Heights, and heard, for the first time, that Catherine has been, and is yet, very ill. I must not write to her, I suppose, and my brother is either too angry or too distressed to answer what I sent him. Still, I must write to somebody, and the only choice left me is you. 5

Inform Edgar that I'd give the world to see his face again—that my heart returned to Thrushcross Grange in twenty-four hours after I left it, and is there at this moment, full of warm feelings for him, and Catherine! I can't follow it, though— (those words are underlined) they need not expect me, and they may draw what conclusions they please; taking care, however, to lay nothing at the door of my weak will or deficient affection. 10

The remainder of the letter is for yourself alone. I want to ask you two questions: the first is—How did you contrive to preserve the common sympathies of human nature when you resided here? I cannot recognise any sentiment which those around share with me. 15

The second question, I have great interest in; it is this—Is Mr. Heathcliff a man? If so, is he mad? And if not, is he a devil? I shan't tell my reasons for making this inquiry; but, I beseech you to explain, if you can, what I have married: that is, when you call to see me; and you must call, Ellen, very soon. Don't write, but come, and bring me something from Edgar. 20

Now, you shall hear how I have been received in my new home, as I am led to imagine the Heights will be. It is to amuse myself that I dwell on such subjects as the lack of external comforts: they never occupy my thoughts, except at the moment when I miss them. I should laugh and dance for joy, if I found their absence was the total of my miseries, and the rest was an unnatural dream! 25

The sun set behind the Grange, as we turned on to the moors; by that, I judged it to be six o'clock; and my companion halted half-an-hour, to inspect the park, and the gardens, and, probably, the place itself, as well as he could; so it was dark when we dismounted in the paved yard of the farm-house, and your old fellow-servant, Joseph, issued out to receive us by the light of a dip candle. He did it with a courtesy that redounded to his credit. His first act was to elevate his torch to a level with my face, squint malignantly, project his under lip, and turn away. Then he took the two horses, and led them into the stables; reappearing for the purpose of locking the outer gate, as if we lived in an ancient castle. 30

Heathcliff stayed to speak to him, and I entered the kitchen—a dingy, untidy hole; I daresay you would not know it, it is so changed since it was in your charge. By the fire stood a ruffianly child, strong in limb and dirty in garb, with a look of Catherine in his eyes and about his mouth. 40

“This is Edgar’s legal nephew,” I reflected—“mine in a manner; I must shake hands, and—yes—I must kiss him. It is right to establish a good understanding at the beginning.”

I approached, and, attempting to take his chubby fist, said:

45

“How do you do, my dear?”

He replied in a jargon I did not comprehend.

“Shall you and I be friends, Hareton?” was my next essay at conversation.

An oath, and a threat to set Throttler on me if I did not “frame off,” rewarded my perseverance.

50

“Hey, Throttler, lad!” whispered the little wretch, rousing a half-bred bull-dog from its lair in a corner. “Now, wilt tuh be ganging?” he asked authoritatively.

GEOFFREY CHAUCER: The Franklin's Prologue and Tale

- 5 Either (a) 'Chaucer presents the conflict between the demands of love and the demands of marriage.'

How far, and in what ways, do you agree with this view of The Franklin's Prologue and Tale?

- Or (b) Paying close attention to language and tone, discuss the following extract, showing what it reveals about Chaucer's methods and concerns in The Franklin's Prologue and Tale.

What sholde I make a lenger tale of this?
 Unto his brotheres bed he comen is,
 And swich confort he yaf hym for to gon
 To Orliens that he up stirte anon, 5
 And on his wey forthward thanne is he fare
 In hope for to been lissed of his care.

Whan they were come almoost to that citee,
 But if it were a two furlong or thre,
 A yong clerk romynge by hymself they mette, 10
 Which that in Latyn thriftily hem grette,
 And after that he seyde a wonder thyng:
 "I knowe," quod he, "the cause of youre comyng."
 And er they ferther any foote wente,
 He tolde hem al that was in hire entente. 15

This Briton clerk hym asked of felawes 15
 The whiche that he had knowe in olde dawes,
 And he answerde hym that they dede were,
 For which he weep ful ofte many a teere.

Doun of his hors Aurelius lighte anon, 20
 And with this magicien forth is he gon
 Hoom to his hous, and maden hem wel at ese.
 Hem lakked no vitaille that myghte hem plese.
 So wel arrayed hous as ther was oon
 Aurelius in his lyf saugh nevere noon.

He shewed hym, er he wente to sopeer, 25
 Forestes, parkes ful of wilde deer;
 Ther saugh he hertes with hir hornes hye,
 The gretteste that evere were seyn with ye.
 He saugh of hem an hondred slayn with houndes,
 And somme with arwes blede of bittre woundes. 30
 He saugh, whan voyded were these wilde deer,
 These fauconers upon a fair ryver,
 That with hir haukes han the heron slayn.

Tho saugh he knyghtes justyng in a playn; 35
 And after this he dide hym swich plesaunce
 That he hym shewed his lady on a daunce,
 On which hymself he daunced, as hym thoughte.
 And whan this maister that this magyk wroughte
 Saugh it was tyme, he clapte his handes two, 40
 And farewell! Al oure revel was ago.
 And yet remoeved they nevere out of the hous,

Whil they saugh al this sighte merveillous,
But in his studie, ther as his bookes be,
They seten stille, and no wight but they thre.

CHARLES DICKENS: Great Expectations

- 6 Either (a) Discuss some of the effects created by Dickens's presentation of marriage and married couples.
- Or (b) Paying close attention to the effects of the writing, discuss the following passage, showing what it contributes to your understanding of Pip and Miss Havisham.

"This is an authority to him to pay you that money, to lay out at your irresponsible discretion for your friend. I keep no money here; but if you would rather Mr. Jaggers knew nothing of the matter, I will send it to you."

"Thank you, Miss Havisham; I have not the least objection to receiving it from him." 5

She read me what she had written, and it was direct and clear, and evidently intended to absolve me from any suspicion of profiting by the receipt of the money. I took the tablets from her hand, and it trembled again, and it trembled more as she took off the chain to which the pencil was attached, and put it in mine. All this she did, without looking at me. 10

"My name is on the first leaf. If you can ever write under my name, 'I forgive her,' though ever so long after my broken heart is dust – pray do it!"

"O Miss Havisham," said I, "I can do it now. There have been sore mistakes; and my life has been a blind and thankless one; and I want forgiveness and direction far too much, to be bitter with you." 15

She turned her face to me for the first time since she had averted it, and, to my amazement, I may even add to my terror, dropped on her knees at my feet; with her folded hands raised to me in the manner in which, when her poor heart was young and fresh and whole, they must often have been raised to heaven from her mother's side. 20

To see her with her white hair and her worn face kneeling at my feet, gave me a shock through all my frame. I entreated her to rise, and got my arms about her to help her up; but she only pressed that hand of mine which was nearest to her grasp, and hung her head over it and wept. I had never seen her shed a tear before, and, in the hope that the relief might do her good, I bent over her without speaking. She was not kneeling now, but was down upon the ground. 25

"O!" she cried, despairingly. "What have I done! What have I done!"

"If you mean, Miss Havisham, what have you done to injure me, let me answer. Very little. I should have loved her under any circumstances – Is she married?"

"Yes." 30

It was a needless question, for a new desolation in the desolate house had told me so.

"What have I done! What have I done!" She wrung her hands, and crushed her white hair, and returned to this cry over and over again. "What have I done!" 35

I knew not how to answer, or how to comfort her. That she had done a grievous thing in taking an impressionable child to mould into the form that her wild resentment, spurned affection, and wounded pride, found vengeance in, I knew full well. But that, in shutting out the light of day, she had shut out infinitely more; that, in seclusion, she had secluded herself from a thousand natural and healing influences; that, her mind, brooding solitary, had grown diseased, as all minds do and must and will that reverse the appointed order of their Maker; I knew equally well. And could I look upon her without compassion, seeing her punishment in the ruin she was, in her profound unfitness for this earth on which she was placed, in the vanity of sorrow which had become a master mania, like the vanity of penitence, the vanity of remorse, the vanity of unworthiness, and other monstrous vanities that have been curses in this world? 40 45

ANDREW MARVELL: Selected Poems

- 7 Either (a) 'What in the world most fair appears
Yea, even laughter, turns to tears.' (from Eyes and Tears)

With this quotation in mind, discuss some of the ways Marvell presents beauty. You should refer to three poems in your answer.

- Or (b) Paying close attention to the effects of the writing, discuss the following poem and show what it contributes to your understanding of Marvell's poetic methods and concerns.

The Fair Singer

To make a final conquest of all me,
Love did compose so sweet an enemy,
In whom both beauties to my death agree,
Joining themselves in fatal harmony;
That while she with her eyes my heart does bind,
She with her voice might captivate my mind.

I could have fled from one but singly fair:
My disentangled soul itself might save,
Breaking the curlèd trammels of her hair;
But how should I avoid to be her slave,
Whose subtle art invisibly can wreathe
My fetters of the very air I breathe?

10

It had been easy fighting in some plain,
Where victory might hang in equal choice.
But all resistance against her is vain,
Who has the advantage both of eyes and voice,
And all my forces needs must be undone,
She having gainèd both the wind and sun.

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY: Selected Poems

- 8 Either (a) Discuss some of the ways Shelley presents the conflict between joy and despair in his poetry. You should refer to three poems in your answer.
- Or (b) Paying close attention to the effects of the writing, discuss the following extract from The Cloud, showing what it contributes to your understanding of Shelley's methods and concerns.

I bring fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,
 From the seas and the streams;
 I bear light shade for the leaves when laid
 In their noon-day dreams. 5
 From my wings are shaken the dews that waken
 The sweet buds every one,
 When rocked to rest on their mother's breast,
 As she dances about the Sun.
 I wield the flail of the lashing hail,
 And whiten the green plains under, 10
 And then again I dissolve it in rain,
 And laugh as I pass in thunder.

I sift the snow on the mountains below,
 And their great pines groan aghast;
 And all the night 'tis my pillow white, 15
 While I sleep in the arms of the blast.
 Sublime on the towers of my skiey bowers,
 Lightning my pilot sits;
 In a cavern under is fettered the thunder,
 It struggles and howls at fits; 20
 Over Earth and Ocean, with gentle motion,
 This pilot is guiding me,
 Lured by the love of the genii that move
 In the depths of the purple sea;
 Over the rills, and the crags, and the hills, 25
 Over the lakes and the plains,
 Wherever he dream, under mountain or stream,
 The Spirit he loves remains;
 And I all the while bask in Heaven's blue smile,
 Whilst he is dissolving in rains. 30

The sanguine Sunrise, with his meteor eyes,
 And his burning plumes outspread,
 Leaps on the back of my sailing rack,
 When the morning star shines dead;
 As on the jag of a mountain crag, 35
 Which an earthquake rocks and swings,
 An eagle alit one moment may sit
 In the light of its golden wings.
 And when Sunset may breathe, from the lit Sea beneath,
 Its ardours of rest and of love, 40
 And the crimson pall of eve may fall
 From the depths of Heaven above,
 With wings folded I rest, on mine aëry nest,
 As still as a brooding dove.
