2 English as a global language

The following two extracts are about how different varieties of English are evident across the globe.

Discuss what you feel are the most important issues raised here relating to the changing use of English as a global language. You should refer to specific details from the passage as well as to ideas and examples from your wider study.

Extract A – Which variety of English should you speak?
(from a British Council article in 2014)

The results of my research suggest that people are increasingly and deliberately using English in a way that identifies them with a particular place.

Instead we need to recognise the roles and functions that different varieties of English, including those of standard English, fulfil.

Extract B – Examples of varieties of standard spoken English
(from a Daily Telegraph article in 2008)

Indian: He's a real enthu guy.

British: That guy is really enthusiastic.

South African: Jislaaik, china, I was in a bit of a dwaal.

British: Wow, my friend, I was in a bit of a daze.

5

Nigerian Pidgin: I no know wetin u dey yarn.

British: I don't know what you are talking about.

Islander Creole (from Colombian islands of San Andrés and Providencia): Da wan gud ting se di pikniny dem laan fi riid an rait.

British: It is a good thing that the children learn to read and write.

TURN OVER FOR QUESTION 3.

3 Language acquisition by children and teenagers

The following text is a transcription of two extracts from a conversation between Nathan (4 years 3 months) and his mother. She is showing him photographs of people with different occupations and asking him about them.

Discuss ways in which Nathan and his mother are using language here. You should refer to specific details from the transcription, relating your observations to ideas from your studies of language acquisition.

Extract A

Mother: oh look at this one
